LSPR Institute of Communication & Business
The Leading Graduate School of Communication & Business | ASEAN Global Campus

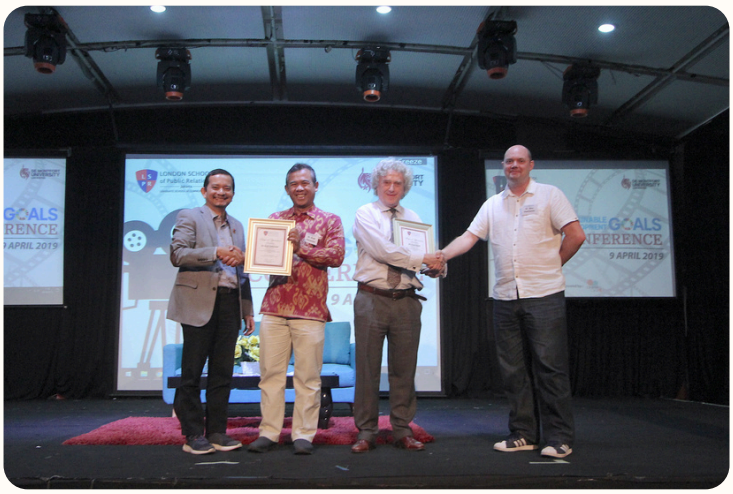

SDG Film Festival

SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT GOALS

SDG FILM FESTIVAL

Supporting Documents

SDG FILM FESTIVAL 2019 - 2025

SDG FILM FESTIVAL 2019

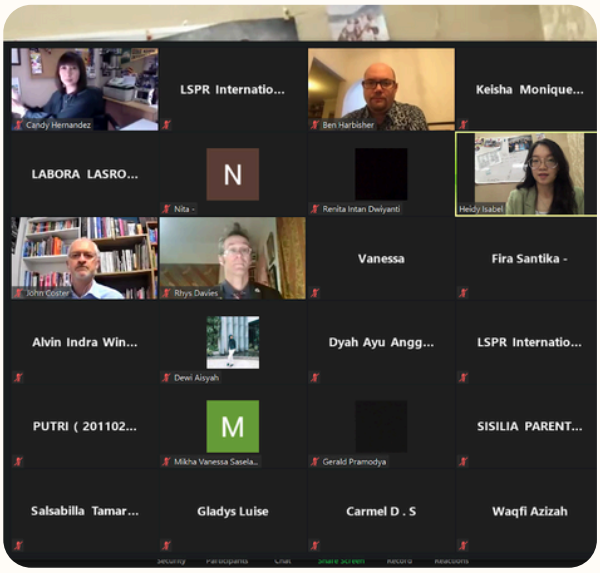

The inaugural SDG Film Festival was held on April 20, 2019 at LSPR Transpark Bekasi, Jakarta. The festival brought together student films from various countries, with the spirit of promoting sustainable development issues.

The highest award, Best Overall Film, was won by Sam Jones (UK). However, Indonesia achieved remarkable recognition through Raihan Amer Sekar Raya, who won the *Chairul Tanjung Award for Best Production Values. In addition, Roy Oswaldha (Indonesia) became one of the runners-up alongside participants from the UK. LSPR itself played a dual role as the host and sponsor of special awards such as the Environment Award and Local Impact Award.

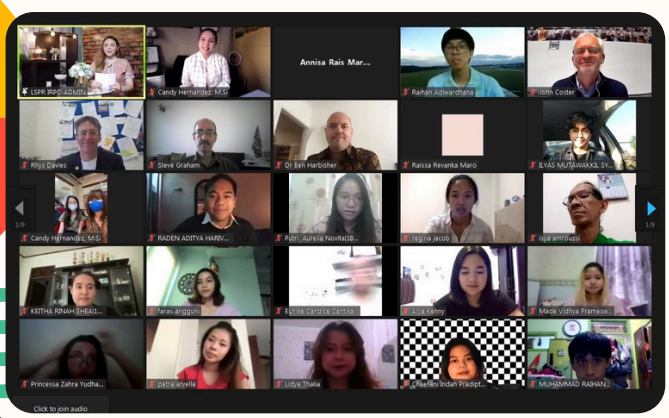

SDG FILM FESTIVAL 2020

In 2020, the festival had to adapt to the COVID-19 pandemic. The SDG Film Festival was held online on December 18, 2020, led by LSPR Communication & Business Institute in collaboration with international partners such as De Montfort University (UK), Asia Pacific University Malaysia, and the American University of Phnom Penh (Cambodia).

The award categories were diverse: from Best Overall Film, DMU Environment Award, APU Production Award, to LSPR PSA Award. LSPR students achieved great success: Yang Hae Na won Best Overall Film as well as the AUPP Dramatization/Re-enactment Award, while Wichita Lindsey Homerus won the LSPR PSA Award. These achievements demonstrated the strong presence and dominance of Indonesian students in the international competition.

SDG FILM FESTIVAL 2021

The 2021 edition took place virtually on June 25, 2021, with broad participation from international partners. The festival invited several institutions, including LSPR Institute of Communication and Business (Indonesia), De Montfort University (UK), Asia Pacific University (Malaysia), American University of Phnom Penh (Cambodia), and the Documentary Media Centre (UK).

LSPR once again gained recognition through multiple awards. Made Vidhya Prameswari won both the DMU Environment Award and the LSPR PSA Award. Meanwhile, Faras Angguni contributed two more victories: the Documentary Media Centre Showcase Award and the #DMUGlobal Oral Histories Award. These achievements highlighted the consistent contributions of LSPR students in voicing SDG issues through film.

SDG FILM FESTIVAL 2019 – 2025

SDG FILM FESTIVAL 2022

The 2022 edition was held online on June 24, 2022, via Zoom, marking significant growth in international collaboration. Alongside LSPR Jakarta as the host, other partners included De Montfort University (UK), Asia Pacific University (Malaysia), American University of Phnom Penh (Cambodia), Documentary Media Centre (UK), Media Discourse Centre (UK), and Nottingham College (UK), all of which supported the festival and award categories.

The award categories expanded further, from Best Overall Film, Creative Excellence, PSA & PR, Sustainable Cities, Environment, Oral Histories, Dramatisation, Critical Intervention, to the Showcase Award. LSPR students dominated: Zahra Trinasari Afrisia won Best Overall Film and the Showcase Award; Zahra Ayu Witantri received the Critical Intervention Award; Ourspace Production won the PSA & PR Award; and Miftah Suwargo secured the Sustainable Cities Award. This series of wins reflected the dominance of LSPR and Indonesian students in addressing SDG issues through short films.

SDG FILM FESTIVAL 2023

In 2023, the SDG Film Festival was held on June 30, 2023, at LSPR Transpark Bekasi, Jakarta, in a hybrid format that had matured since the previous year. The combination of on-site and online participation enabled the festival to reach a wider audience and foster stronger international collaboration.

The number of partners expanded significantly, including Nottingham Trent University (UK), Hosei University (Japan), Coventry University (UK), Asia Pacific University (Malaysia), American University of Phnom Penh (Cambodia), Documentary Media Centre (UK), and the Media Discourse Centre (UK). These institutions not only sponsored categories but also contributed as speakers, judges, and collaborators in workshops and academic sessions.

LSPR students stood out across many categories. Eugene Karl won both the Best Film Award and Film Craft Award. Charisma Zaida Alliyah received the Sustainable Cities Award, while Fathiya Hannan won the PSA & PR Award. Other victories included Crissella Puspita Lilly (Critical Intervention Award), Vallian Royce (Environment Award), Lunetta Salmanissa (Developmental Disabilities Award), Aurelia Theodora Hansell (Factual Storytelling Award), and Alfira Nur Jasra who achieved a double win with the Oral Histories Award and Community Film Award. The Benta Production team also won the Inclusive Award.

With so many awards secured, 2023 became a year of overwhelming success for LSPR students, reaffirming their strong influence in nearly every award category.

SDG FILM FESTIVAL 2019 - 2025

SDG FILM FESTIVAL 2024

The sixth edition was held on June 28, 2024, at LSPR Bekasi, once again in hybrid format. International collaboration broadened to include Coventry University (UK), De Montfort University (UK), Asia Pacific University (Malaysia), Nottingham Trent University (UK), Nottingham College (UK), Sky Blue Studios (UK), and the Media Discourse Centre (UK). These partners not only sponsored categories but also participated as speakers in discussions on sustainability and film.

Indonesian students continued to shine. Selalu Production won the Public Relations & PSA Award (LSPR), Maria Njo received the Leadership & Sustainability Award (LSPR), and Erika Erika brought home the Critical Intervention Award. The festival also introduced new themes focusing on inclusion, leadership, and sustainable film production.

The presence of global partners at LSPR reinforced Indonesia's position as a vital hub in the global conversation on SDGs through film.

SDG FILM FESTIVAL 2025

The seventh edition took place in 2025 at LSPR Jakarta. International partners included Asia Pacific University (Malaysia), Universiti Malaysia Sarawak (UNIMAS, Malaysia), Coventry University Group (UK), University of Derby (UK), Nottingham Trent University (UK), and the Media Discourse Centre (UK). In addition to sponsoring award categories, these institutions enriched the festival with academic discussions and technical support.

This year's festival introduced a groundbreaking innovation: the Sustainable Filmmaking Guide and a sustainability rating system — a new step that evaluated not only the content of films but also their production processes.

From Indonesia, LSPR students once again demonstrated their strength across various categories: Leftovers won the Critical Intervention Award, Harapan Dari Utara won the People of Determination Award, Drops of Hope won the Unheard Voices Award, The Art of Waste won the award for Responsible Consumption and Production and Secangkir Harapan won the Mind, Body and Spirit Award.

These achievements underscored LSPR's continued dominance in 2025, especially in critical and thematic categories such as social intervention, representation of marginalized voices, sustainability, and spirituality.